point of the English mainland and the closest to the North American continent. Looking out to sea from here allows the mind to appreciate the scale of the Atlantic Ocean, seeming to stretch beyond the horizon for ever. The granite cliffs, which make up the coastline of West Cornwall, are seen at their best here where the combination of the power of the sea and the strength of the cliffs reduce man to a mere spectator ...

In previous years there has been a service from St Ives to Lands End, and LE to Penzance. Highly recommended, very scenic. Just ask for a timetable at the bus station when you get here. Be aware that you will need to walk from the bus stop to the actual Lands End, passing through a tacky theme park en route, and having to pay for the privilege.
